A PROSPECTIVE LAW SCHOOL STUDENT HANDLES OUR PHONES

"This place is amazing," she says.

It's an average day for Sarah Thompson, who didn't know about the Delhi Center or the Delhi neighborhood until two months ago. She's guiding our visitors to a workshop on diabetes, fielding questions about Delhi room rentals and passing a Spanish-language caller to a co-worker.

Sarah Thompson, a recent graduate of the University of California, Irvine who will soon enter law school, is now the first face you'll see as you enter our building. Sarah is our receptionist. And keeping Delhi tradition, she's a volunteer.

"This place is awesome," she said on her work break. "Everyone is very grateful for the services as they try to make their lives better."

"I see parents coming here to take parenting classes to be better parents, which is amazing. There are people coming in to take English and computer classes and do physical fitness," she said. "I never see anyone unhappy. They are all glad we are here to offer these services."

Sarah, 26, handles the front desk traffic with ease, occasionally getting a chance to study for the LSAT, a law school admission test. Sarah also works as a restaurant server, as she has for eight years, working her way through college.

"I paid one quarter at a time and lived on Top Ramen," she said, referring to instant soup. Now she dreams of getting accepted at the law school of the University of Southern California, UCLA or Chapman University.

Sarah said she is enjoying giving back to the community while bolstering her law school application with her volunteer experience.

Welcome to Delhi, Sarah!
